Wealth Building and Worker Protection Strategies to Advance Health

The gap between housing costs and wages continues to widen in the Bay Area, forcing many families to make increasingly hard choices. Addressing this crisis requires taking action on both sides of this equation—ensuring stable, affordable housing on one hand, and economic wellness on the other. Join us on October 27th to learn about innovative strategies that health departments can take to support wealth building, decent wages, and worker protections, and to use our institutional weight to anchor equitable economic development.

Speakers

- Curtis Chan, San Francisco County: On San Francisco's work to improve worker conditions and parental and children's health.
- Shannon Ladner Beasley, Contra Costa County: On Contra Costa's work building pipelines into the public health field for high-schoolers.
- Dave Zuckerman, Healthcare Engagement Anchor Institution Initiative, Democracy Collaborative on Anchor Institution Strategies to leverage institutional resources to support community economic development and equity.

Objectives

- Build economic empowerment strategy to complement BARHII's housing affordability work
- Begin discussion of how institutions can use their power to advance economic opportunity
- Learn from successful health department efforts to build workforce development pipelines and equitable economic policies
- Think tank strategies for local programs to support wealth building
